1. Read the given passage carefully.

EI Nino

There was a time when people looked heavenward and prayed, "Ye Gods, give us rain, keep the drought away." Today, there are those who pray, "Give us rain, drive EI Nino away."

EI Nino and its atmospheric equivalent, called the Southern Oscillation, are together referred to as ENSO (EI Nino/ Southern Oscillation), and are household words today. Meteorologists recognise it as often being responsible for natural disasters worldwide. But this wisdom dawned only after countries suffered, first from the lack of knowledge, and then from the lack of co-ordination between policy making and the advances in scientific knowledge.

Put simply, EI Nino is a weather event restricted to certain tropical shores, especially the Peruvian coast. The event has diametrically opposite impacts on the land and the sea. The Peruvian shore is a desert. But every few years, an unusually warm ocean current, EI Nino, warms up the normally cold surface waters off the Peruvian coast, causing heavy rains in the early half of the year.

And then, almost miraculously, the desert is matted green. Crops like cotton, coconuts and bananas grow on the otherwise stubbornly barren land. These are the Peruvian's "anos de abundancia", or years of abundance. This current has come to be termed as "EI Nino" or the Christ Child, because it usually appears as an enhancement of a mildly warm current that normally occurs here around every Christmas. But this boon on land is accompanied by oceanic disasters. Normally, the waters off the South American coast are among the most productive in the world, because of constant upwelling of nutrient-rich cold waters from the ocean depths. EI Nino stirs up only the surface water without touching the depths of the ocean. This interferes with food production and disturbs the food chain. Many marine species, including anchovies temporarily disappear.

This is just one damning effect of EI Nino. Over the years its full impact has been studied, and what the Peruvians once regarded as manna, is now seen as a major threat. (336)

On the basis of your reading of the passage above answer the following questions by ticking the correct options.

- (1) EI Nino affects climate conditions.....

Upliftment of Women

In the last four decades, there has been a very significant rise in the number of lower middle and middle class women who seek employment to supplement their household income. While there is little doubt that women from the lower ranks of society have always had to work in the fields or in petty jobs to sustain themselves and their families, there were strong objections and a marked reluctance among the middle classes to allow women to step out of the house to earn a living. Their basic role continued to be gender-based, as daughters, wives and mothers. Much has changed since Independence.

Education, greater opportunities for acquiring diverse skills, growing urbanisation, rise in cost of living and growing aspiration for a better standard of living are among the many factors that have led to a continual rise in the number of women who seek a job, whether in the home or outside. In the process, erstwhile prejudices and barriers about women entering certain professions are breaking down. (171)

On the basis of your reading of the passage above answer the following questions by ticking the correct options.

- (1) Over the past few years the number of _____ women has increased.
 - (a) educated
 - (b) working
 - (c) independent
 - (d) modern
- (2) Not many middle-class women worked earlier because _____.
 - (a) they did not like to work
 - (b) aggression in society
 - (c) the families objected
 - (d) limited needs
- (3) Women moved out to work _____.
 - (a) for financial reasons
 - (b) because of feminist movement
 - (c) because of growing awareness
 - (d) to prove themselves
- (4) Because women have started working, the _____ against them is decreasing.
 - (a) discrimination
 - (b) crime
 - (c) disrespect
 - (d) impudence
- (5) The antonym for 'reluctance' is _____.
 - (a) hesitation
 - (b) desire
 - (c) passion
 - (d) keenness

3. Read the passage given below carefully.

- (1) For Urvashi Narain, shopping at her local Indian market in Rockville, Maryland offers a taste of home beyond the food. "It's very Indian. You feel like you're back in Delhi," she says. "It's badly organized, but it's chock full of stuff in a tiny space. The people working there are very sweet and friendly. And they try to make you feel like you're getting special Indian discounts," she says with a wink.
- (2) Narain shops for spices that are difficult to find at the typical American supermarket. "We also buy parathas, frozen foods, bhelpuri mix—lots of savoury things from India that we love to get—things that I don't have time to make myself. Or knowledge," she laughs. She buys her golgappas to try and recreate the typical Delhi chaat house experience. "Of course, it's not the same," she admits. "But you have to settle."

- (3) Step into any of these shops and experience the familiar smell of ripening mangoes and asafetida, the soft sound of two aunties chatting in Hindi, rows and rows of rice, spices and chutneys, and a wall of Bollywood DVDs featuring posters of Shah Rukh Khan. It all comes together to create a pocket of India that feels like home for the South Asian community. Colorful signs adorn shop windows, advertising services and classes that appeal to the typical customer : an Asian beauty salon offering eyebrow threading, an upcoming classical Indian music performance, a lecture by an Indian guru and yoga classes.

Read the questions given below and write the option you consider the most appropriate in your answer sheet.

- (1) By saying that shopping in the Indian store is 'a taste of home beyond food', Urvashi means that :
- (i) the experience is like being away from India
 - (ii) the experience is like eating Indian food
 - (iii) the experience of shopping makes her miss India
 - (iv) none of the above
- (2) In the first paragraph Urvashi wants to show that :
- (i) the discounts are not popular
 - (ii) the shops give great discounts
 - (iii) the shops say that they give discounts but one cannot be sure
 - (iv) all the above
- (3) When Urvashi says that she doesn't have knowledge, she means :
- (i) she doesn't know how to cook Indian savouries
 - (ii) she has not gone to school
 - (iii) she doesn't understand English
 - (iv) she doesn't know how to make golgappas
- (4) When Urvashi says that "But you have to settle." She means that
- (i) they are not ready to adjust
 - (ii) they have to adjust because they have little choice
 - (iii) they don't miss India
 - (iv) all the above
- (5) Indian people feel at home in this shop because of
- (i) Hindi being spoken and the Bollywood posters
 - (ii) sight of jars full of rice
 - (iii) smell of the spices and ripening mangoes
 - (iv) all the above

4. Read the passage given below carefully.

If you like hiking or motor biking, the quaint little town of Lachung (loosely translated as 'small mountain') nestled among the snow-capped peaks of the middle Himalayas might just be the perfect choice.

Located at the confluence of the rivers Lachung and Lachen (both tributaries of the Teesta), Lachung was described as the most picturesque village of Sikkim by British explorer Joseph Hooker. It lies about 125 km from Gangtok, Sikkim's capital, and shares a border with China.

"Lachung is so untouched that when my husband and I went there last year, it looked almost unreal," says Pragati Bhate, a Mumbai-based trekking enthusiast. A mere 25 km from the town is the Yumthang Valley home to the Shingba Rhododendron Sanctuary that has over 24 species of rhododendron, the state flower.

The best way to get to Lachung is to take a train or fly to Gangtok and then hire a cab to take you to the village. Keep in mind that accommodation facilities are basic-there are only three hotels, a few bed-and-breakfasts and a lone resort.

Read the questions given below and write the option you consider the most appropriate in your answer sheet.

- (1) Lachung is a good place for people who love
 - (i) driving and swimming
 - (ii) motor biking and diving
 - (iii) hiking and biking
 - (iv) hiking and swimming
- (2) Lachung is situated in

(i) Gangtok	(ii) Nepal
(iii) China	(iv) Sikkim
- (3) Yumthang Valley is famous for its
 - (i) wine
 - (ii) scenery
 - (iii) rhododendron sanctuary
 - (iv) colourful flowers
- (4) We know that Lachung is not very well known because
 - (i) there are very few tourists
 - (ii) there are very few places to stay in
 - (iii) the place is unspoilt by pollution
 - (iv) all of the above
- (5) The word 'confluence' means
 - (i) diverging
 - (ii) coming together
 - (iii) passing by
 - (iv) pouring out from
